

brilliantexits blog

helping you out, when happily-ever-after isn't working anymore.

Divorcing=Goodbye Facebook & Twitter

July 23, 2010

According to family law attorney Alan Plevy, anyone going through a divorce should deactivate all social media accounts, unless it's used for strictly professional purposes. Seems radical? Consider that 66% of attorneys gather info about the x2b via Facebook alone. And, even if you practice restraint, your "friends" can inadvertantly post damaging info.

"For some reason or another, people seem to think that these sites are private," Alan says. "And then they do things on those sites that tend to get them in trouble." Read more .

Snooping can be good, but if your issue is you can't stop yourself from obsessing over your ex, check out "The Ex-Blocker" ap to make him/her vanish from from your computer...

Sharon Zarozny

Share this Blog

+ SHARE

Email Subscription

Enter your email address to subscribe to this blog and receive notifications of new posts by email.

Sign me up!